3 How to find the parts and order them

The image shows a web interface for searching car parts. At the top, there is a 'Search product' section with two input fields. The first field is labeled 'Article number' and has a dropdown arrow. The second field is labeled 'Article name or number' and has a search icon. Below the search fields is a 'Products' section with a list of categories. Each category is preceded by a small icon: a plus sign for 'Volvo', 'Ford', 'Miscellaneous car models', and 'New products'; and a right-pointing arrow for 'Treasure trove' and 'Alla'.

In the menu to your left you can search for items by using our part numbers or the item descriptions.

Please note that we are using the same part numbers as Volvo do/did. The same goes for most of the Ford Mustang-parts as well even though you'll find some variations there.

You can also find parts by going through the product categories. These are almost structured as the Volvo catalog, i.e nine wider categories which are divided into smaller groups.

By clicking on the product categories you will get to list of products where the available parts are shown. You'll find prices, required quantity per category and you can put the item/s to your shopping chart.

Later on these pages will be extended to include drawings/diagrams. Then the parts list will be correlated to the drawing and parts will be given a position so you easily can find them.

You can add items by specify how many you'll need and then click "buy"
